MINISTRY BRINGS IN RADICAL LICENSE BILL.

Ralfour Denounces It as Robbery-Not Likely to Pass Unchanged—Would Wipe Out One-third of All Saloons and Invade other President, Theodore Roosevelt, there Even the West End Clubs in Londo

LONDON, Feb. 27.—The country has long been speculating on the Government's promised licensing bill, dealing with the liquor trade and allied subjects, which Chancellor of the Exchequer Asquith introduced in the House of Commons this afternoon. It was known that it would be a drastic temperance measure, but few if any expected such sweeping proposals as Mr. Asquith announced.

If enacted the bill will reduce the existing licensed houses in England and Wales by one-third; in other words it will abolish about 30,000 bars at which intoxicants are now sold. There will thus be one licensed house to every 800 or 800 people in towns and one for every 400 or 500 in the country districts, compared with the present general average of one for every 370 inhabitants.

Compensation will be given to those who are dispossessed, being levied as now in certain cases upon the remaining license holders, but after fourteen years no compensation will be paid when a license is taken away. The granting of all future new licenses will be the subject of local option, a poll being taken when demanded and a simple majority to decide. A refusal to grant a new license will be rescindable only after three years by another poll.

Public houses outside of London will be allowed to keep open only three hours on Sunday. With a view to preventing clubs from becoming virtually public house, and evading the law they are brought within the act. and must renew their icenses annually. They must also submit to police inspection. There will be no exceptions, and and the law will be applicable to the fashionable clubs in Pall Mall and St. James's street equally with the workmen's beer clubs. Justices of the peace will act locally as the licensing authority. They are empowered to order children entirely excluded from bars, to close bars on polling days and to decide whether women shall be employed as bartenders. One of the essential aims of the act is the recovery by the State of property in licenses, which theoretically has always existed but has been allowed to escape its control.

In the course of the debate on the measure strong criticism developed. Mr. Balfour struck the keynote of the opposition's attitude in declaring the bill was robbery. Everybody in the House seemed anxious to speak. The extreme temperance reformers were delighted, while every defender of the liquor trade foresaw blank

The consensus of opinion in the lobbies was that the bill is too radical to pass as it stands and that it will be modified by the combined efforts of the moderates of all "Unfair," "unworkable," "dishonest," "socialistic," "mean" and "spiteful" are among the epithets bestowed by the leading brewers and wine and spirit merchants upon Mr. Asquith's bill. They say it is death by slow torture for the brewing companies and that most of them will be ruined. It will create a financial cataclysm at the Stock Exchange which will affect other than brewery finances. In the meantime it does not inconvenience the consumer in the least and it will not promote temperance one jota.

Some Conservatives profess to be really delighted, declaring that the Government has committed suicide.

RUSSIA PLOTTING WAR.

Hungarian Expert Says She Means to Attack England Soon.

LONDON, Feb. 27.-Prof. Arminius Vambery of Budapest, whose information and views upon international politics command respect throughout Europe, makes a gloomy prophecy. He declares that the recently made Anglo-Russian convention will be repudiated by Russia whenever she may consider such a course convenient. He asserts that Russia is preparing for war against Great Britain as a means of diverting attention from internal revolution.

He adds: *Nothing could be more popular in Russia than a war with England. The Russian peasants have been educated to believe that Russia was not defeated by Japan, but indirectly by England. The new convention may serve for a time, but it is not the sheet anchor England supposes was a profound silence. That, it was explained, was because most of the persons present were in sympathy with or affiliated with the American Tobacco Company, which apparently doesn't like the President of the United States. The treatment that toast received was all the more pronounced when compared with the greeting that Uncle Joe Cannon's name got. Uncle Joe is a North Carolinian by descent, and that explains it. There was rapturous applause for him.

Dr. John C. Kilgo, president of Trinity College in Durham, N.C., to which institute James B. Duke gave $1,000,000 simply because he likes Dr. Kilgo, got up to tell about the growth of prohibition in the South and what it means. Dr. Kilgo pitched into the South good and plenty. He said the temperance movement wasn't due to the W. C. T. U. or the churches, but was a natural movement of Southern citizens to break out of their civic unrighteousness. He characterized the strength of prohibition characterized the strength of prohibition as due to the desire of Southerners to show that they had an opinion of their own, uncontrolled by parties as a mass.

"The South has allowed its civic morals to decay," said Dr. Kilgo. "The citizens have been forced to act as a mass. Individualism thus was lost and conscience died. There was no interest that was not capitalized in behalf of some unholy ambition. The South now is casting an unfettered vote and any movement that will press home to the South a sense of civic righteousness will be a benefit beyond economic calculation."

Dr. Kilgo appealed for a more thoughtful

Kilgo appealed for a more thoughtful and less passionate type of citizenship in the South, one that would be more rational and less easily stirred over trifles. In speaking of the characteristic attitude of the Southerner in politics he told the story of the North Carolinian who bored and bored at an oil well night and day which eventually tapped a vein of natural gas at night when fires were burning near by. The gas burned away up in the air and the negro helpers ran to the house yelling, "Boss. we've struck Hades and she'son fire!" He said the Southerner kept on boring at politics until he got—he didn't say what he got in deference to the women present. Dr. C. TO HELP WOMAN SUFFRAGE. Meeting at Cooper Union at Which a Historic Gavel Is Used.

The thing which created the most enthusiasm at the mass meeting which was held last night at Cooper Union under the auspices of the Interurban Woman Suffrage Council was the gavel wielded by the chairman, Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt.

When Terence V. Powderly was a workngman, years and years ago, Mrs. Catt explained, he had turned the wood from which that gavel was made, and it had served not only to call to order innumerable conventions of Knights of Labor but had subsequently been used by a long list of eminent chairmen, among whom were Charles Parnell, Mr. Gladstone, Robert Ingersoll, Frances Willard, Louis Kossuth, President McKinley and President

The audience of about eight hundred persons, one-third of whom were men, cheered the gavel and threw in an extra one for the man who made it.

Mr. Powderly said that he couldn't remember the time when he hadn't thought that women had just as much right to vote as did men and that it was really very difficult for him to advance any arguments in favor of woman's suffrage, because it seemed to him that it was a self-evident proposition.

REARDON CASE TRANSFERRED. Jerome's Raider Will Have to Be Indicted

Now if He Is to Be Tried. Edward J. Reardon, who was head of District Attorney Jerome's raiding squad, and Sergt. Joseph Wasserman, his chief lieutenant, will be tried in General Sessions on the charges against them that resulted from the East Side raids. There are three charges of oppression and one of extortion against both. They had been held by Magistrate Craue for trial in Special Ses-Magistrate Crane for trial in Special Sessions, but on the motion of their counsel, Abe Levy, Judge Swann yesterday transferred their cases to Genera! Sessions. This means that they will have to be indicted before they are tried.

There is some speculation as to whether District Attorney Jerome will assign a member of his staff to prosecute them or get an outsider.

"SIEGFRIED" IS SUNG AGAIN

BURRIAN MAKES HIS REAPPEAR-ANCE AS THE HERO.

Received With Favor on His First Performance of the Season-Mmes. Fremstad and Kirkby-Lunn and Miss Alten in the Cast - Mr. Mahler Conducts.

A small audience heard the second drama of Wagner's "Der Ring des Nibelungen" at the Metropolitan Opera House last night. It was the second performance of "Siegfried" this season, and these are not the days of intense Wagnerian enthusiasm. It is not necessarily the office of critical comment to account for the falling off in the popularity of any particular class of lyric drama, but it seems patent that just now the operagoing public yearns for potent personalities, and there are too few mong the Wagner singers. Last night Carl Burrian, who has just returned to this country, made his first appearance of the season, impersonating the fearless young hero. Those who are eager to hear the melodic phraseology of Wagner's music should be grateful to Mr. Burrian. His voice, somewhat hard and unyielding, is nevertheless fresh, vibrant and a real tenor. He sings with freedom and in tune. He treats the text with respect and makes nearly all of it intelligible. He accomplishes this without exaggeration of the consonants and without shattering entirely the flow of the

This is much to be said in favor of a Wagnerian tenor, especially in these days when the sensuous beauties of singing are less esteemed in Germany than ruggedness of diction and vigor of declamatory accentuation. But those who love "Siegfried" must have wished last ni fat for a little more of the glory of youth and the spontaneity of untrammelled manhood. Mr. Burrian's Siegfried is too businesslike, too well regulated, too prudent. It lacks abandon and elasticity. The gods have not made it poetical. The other members of the cast were those heard at the previous performance of the work. Of Mme. Fremstad's Brünnhilde, aroused from fire-girt slumber at a very late hour, nothing need be said except to remind the reader that it is not new and that it has already commanded admiration. Mme. Kirkby-Lunn as Erda and Miss Alten as the unseen bird were the other women in the

Mr. Van Roov's Wanderer had all its old characteristics except meliowness of tone, and that indeed is seldom heard in his singing in these days. Mr. Reiss's Mime remains a masterpiece, while Mr. Blass as Tainer and Mr. Goritz as Alberich supply good elements to the representation.

Mr. Mahler conducted, and his reading of the score might easily be made a topic for discussion, but nothing would be accomplished thereby. Intellectual and temperamental traits which in the music of "Tristan and Jedde" were perfectly relied with und Isolde" were perfectly paired with the more refined and subtle qualities of the work failed to achieve a perfect exposition of the tremendous elemental force of the purely physical expression of "Siegfried." Mr. Mahler was more scholarly than passionate in his reading. It was admirable but it was not stirring, except in one or two episodes. It was immensely interesting; but it never overwhelmed. But perhaps after all we ought to be grateful for com-prehension which is a trifle cool. It is better than inconsiderate power. Horace remarks: "Vis consili expers mole ruit

CLAIM WALTER'S PLAY. Cohan & Harris Say They Have a Contract for All His Work.

Legal proceedings are threatened by Cohan & Harris over "Paid in Full." Eugene Walter's successful play which is being produced at the Astor Theatre by Wagenhals & Kemper. Sam H. They have allowed him to sleep on park benches and eat in cheap restaurants when he could scrape up the money, he said, and in view of that generosity he didn't feel that he owed them anything. He said that Cohan & Harris had agreed to call everything square if he would give them the out of town rights, which he turned down

A Recital for Two Planes.

Harold Randolph and Ernest Hutcheson, who hail from the Peabody Conservatory of Music in Baltimore, the former being its head and the latter one of its chief instructors, gave at Mendelssohn Hall yesterday afternoon a recital of music written for two pianos. Schumann's andante and variations in B flat, Reinecke's impromptu on themes from "Manfred," the andante and scherzo from Brahms's F minor sonata, a caprice by Mr. Hutcheson and Liszt's "Con-certo Pathetique" constituted the pro-gramme. Recitals of this kind are seldom gramme. Recitals of this kind are seldom given, and they have a musical interest all their own. It would be difficult to have compositions for two pianos played with more excellent ensemble or with finer taste than are displayed by Messrs. Randolph and

BISHOP INGRAM ON WEALTH. BOOKS AND AUTHORS.

A new book by J. M. Barrie is a literary vent to be greeted with interest and delight. The new volume promised and said to be on the way is a sequel to "The Little White Bird," published five years ago, and will be called "When Wendy Grew

The sequel to "Soprano," by Mr. Marion Crawford, will be called "The Prima Donna" and will deal with the later life of Margaret, the English girl who became a famous singer.

Mr. William J. Locke has been obliged o change his "Beloved Vagabond" decidedly in the process of dramatization. The novelist preserved his hero a vagabond to the end by suppressing his sentimental character and wedding him to the peasant girl who had shared his picturesque vagbondage. The play, requiring situations rather than whimsical reflections, is a pure romance which begins with the quixotic bargain by which Paragot loses his beautiful English Joanna and ends. according to the rules of romance, with the estoration of his original sweetheart. Only in the second act will the true lovers of the picturesque vagabond find the reckless Paragot who delighted them in the

ALWAYS HUNGRY Ordinary Food Never Satisfied Her

A young lady of Minn. writes of her experience: "After a disheartening struggle for five years against the ills attendant on malssimilation of food, I am at last on the high road to recovery and feel impelled to give credit where it is due. Some years ago I had a long illness due to stomach trouble. Every meal I ate caused me either excruciating pain or a dull heavy misery that was even worse. I weighed but 90 lbs., was almost hopeless.

as I found that a poorly nourished body means lack of brain power and ambition. "I was always ravenously hungry and while I could not eat the appetizing dishes on the table, I longed for them. That longing is what prompted me to try Grape-Nuts. The food had a flavor that I liked-rich without being heavy. "I left off my daily laxative as I found I did not need it for Grape-Nuts was so easily digested, constipation soon disappeared. I found, too, that I did not grow tired of Grape-Nuts and continued to eat it.

"It forms my breakfast exclusively and I also eat it with eggs and fruit for my other meals. I have gained 10 pounds in less than a year and that is nothing compared with my gain in strength and courage.

"I can now eat a hearty meal which satisfies my appetite and it does not leave me as formerly, feeling as though I had dined on tacks." "There's a Reason."

BERLIN, Feb. 27 .- The Right Rev. Arthur Ingram, Bishop of London, who is on his way home from Russia, preached in the English church here to-night. There was a big muster from the American colony, presumably owing to the Bishop's recent visit to the United States.

He repeated in part the sermon he preached in New York, saying that the wealthy were not the owners but the stewards of their wealth. Among other things he said he had noticed in America, as in England, a want of joy. He ascribed this to the want of true religion.

Conversing with the correspondent of THE SUN Bishop Ingram said he regretted the publicity American newspapers had given to the game of tennis he played with President Roosevelt. It was likely to give a false impression of his true char acter as a bishop.
